Cape Fear Plant neighbor update
Upcoming implosion event at the Cape Fear Plant

As your Cape Fear Plant neighbor, we want to keep you updated about activities underway at the retired coal plant site. Recently, we sent a postcard about delaying the demolition of the powerhouse building and other remaining structures due to site conditions. Over the past few weeks, we've been able to accelerate this process and have selected to implode the buildings the week of June 1.

We will work closely with state regulators and local law enforcement and emergency management to ensure site safety and security during the implosion event. We remind you to heed safety signage and installed fencing around the plant for your own safety and the safety of those working on the site. Thank you for your support and cooperation as we work to dismantle the plant safely and continue our efforts to modernize power plants across the state.

You can find additional information about our decommissioning program at duke-energy.com/coal-decommissioning and updates about activity at the Cape Fear site at duke-energy.com/cape-fear.

Best regards,

Indira Everett
District Manager, Duke Energy